EARL REFUSES TO ATTEND MEETING IN N. Y. ON RELIEF

Democratic Candidate Urges
Calling Legislature
Into Session

WILL HOLD CONFERENCE

Details of Plans to Be Submitted Will Be Closely Guarded

HARRISBURG, Aug. 30.—(INS)—Pennsylvania's critical relief situation reached another impasse today, as a result of the refusal of George H. Earl, Democratic candidate for governor, to attend the conference in New York City tomorrow, at which it was hoped to settle the problem without a special session of the legislature.

Declaring he refused "to be a party to any sell-out of the taxpayers of Pennsylvania," Earl, from Scranton last night telegraphed the governor his declination of the invitation to the conference, and advised the executive instead to call the legislature into extraordinary session at once, to deal with the relief problem.

Earl vigorously attacked the Republican organization leadership on which he blamed the present crisis. He told the governor he believed that with an election approaching, the legislature could be expected to make a "much fairer distribution of taxes" than ever before.

In addition to Earl and David L. Lawrence, Democratic state chairman, the others expected to attend the conference were: Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania; Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator; Eric H. Biddle, state emergency relief director; attorney general William A. Schnader; M. Harvey Taylor, Republican state chairman.

Although Lawrence had previously announced in Harrisburg that he and Earl would attend the meeting tomorrow, he joined Earl last night in declining the invitation. Details of the plans to be considered at the meeting in New York tomorrow were closely guarded by the Governor and Hopkins. It was indicated however that the plans contemplated obtaining a pledge from the gubernatorial candidates and their party chairmen that the next administration would repay the Federal government the state's share of funds advanced by Washington for relief during September, October, November, and December, and possibly January.

"THUMB-A-THON" TO THE "WALKATHON"

(By "The Stroller")

The devotees of the Walkathon are engaging in a "Thumb-a-Thon". They seem to enjoy to the nth degree watching others walk if it can be called walking, in the Walkathon, but when it comes to reaching the New Jersey capital where the "derby" is now in progress, Bristol folks are merely exercising their thumbs.

Day and night motorists along the Bristol Pike between Bristol and Trenton, are signalled to stop and give individuals or groups "lifts" to the Walkathon. It has not only become a nuisance to the motoring public, but a danger as well, as motorists often in an effort to oblige, halt their cars suddenly in the path of traffic, so as to "pick-up" these seekers after sensation of a new fashion.

COTTON TEXTILE WORKERS ORDERED OUT SATURDAY

Washington, D. C., Aug. 30.—The nation's cotton textile workers, estimated to number 600,000, today were ordered out of the mills, Saturday, September 1st, at 11 p. m., in protest against alleged "intolerable conditions," forced upon the workers.

Several hundred thousand additional workers in the woolen, worsted, silk and rayon industries are expected to follow the lead of the cotton textile workers, and declare a sympathetic strike.

PRISON RIOTERS QUIET

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—The flame of insurrection flickered feebly and all but died at Pennsylvania's Eastern Penitentiary today.

The newly ordained "mailed fist," and the starvation treatment of the convicts was credited with having broken the backbone of the strikes, both in the century-old Cherry Hill prison here, and the "model" branch of the penitentiary at Graterford.

The prisoners however were still being kept in their cells, and it was indicated that the normal routine at both institutions will not be resumed for several days.

"Fifty per cent of the prisoners want to go back to the shops now," announced Warden Herbert ("Hard-boiled") Smith, "but they'll stay in their cells until I want them to go back."

Aiming to stamp out every remaining vestige of the mutiny which lasted four days, Warden Smith continued to enforce the rigid discipline with which he has already humbled the convicts. All but a handful of the inmates of both branches of the institution will be given only one meal a day, until complete quiet has been restored, Smith said.

PRESIDENT MAY AVERT STRIKE

Washington, Aug. 30.—Intervention by President Roosevelt today seemed the only action possible to avert the threatened strike of 600,000 textile workers as employers rejected peace overtures of the Federal representatives. The strike call, ordering a walk-out for Friday night, is to be issued from the capital late today. In spite of an apparently hopeless situation, Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the national labor relations board, continued his efforts to bring the employers and workers together.

According to Garrison's plans the labor department, the labor board, and the recovery administration, would name one member each to a committee of three, which would consider the demands of the workers, and make recommendations in the present situation. The proposed committee would also make recommendations for permanent consideration of labor questions arising in the industry.

MURDER NOT SOLVED

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 30.—The ten Philadelphia men who have been held for questioning in the fatal shooting of James Donegan, Jr., 33, Philadelphia, in a roadside restaurant brawl early Wednesday morning, have all been charged with riot.

The men were taken before Justice of Peace Hobensack and released in $200 bail each. The men will be given hearings at a later date.

Habo Koury, 17, son of George Koury, who lies in a critical condition in an Easton Hospital, as the result of a beating he received during the brawl, is still being detained in the Bucks County Jail.

State Police and Bucks County Detective Russo are still working on the case, but little progress has been made in determining who fired the shot that killed Donegan.

SUSPEND HERR ATOLD

Vienna, Aug. 30.—Herr Atold, general manager of the Alpine Mining Company and Steel Works, the largest industrial concern in Austria, was suspended by the government today, on charges of financing the recent Nazi putsch in Vienna.

Atold plans to leave Austria for Germany where he has been offered a prominent post. The majority of the shares in the Alpine firm are owned by Fritz Thyssen, German steel king, often identified as the "man behind the Hitler movement."

DESCRIBES BUSINESS OF CONDUCTING FAIR

Dr. H. W. Turner, New Hope,
Addresses Kiwanis Club
of Doylestown

FAIR OPENS SEPT. 24TH

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 30.—The business of conducting a fair was described in an interesting address by Dr. H. W. Turner, of New Hope, State veterinarian and president of the Doylestown Fair Association, at the weekly dinner meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Doylestown at the Fountain House.

Dr. Turner was the guest speaker of the evening. As a former member of the business staff of the largest circus in the world, Dr. Turner was well-equipped to discuss the business of running a county fair.

Doylestown Fair week this year will start on Monday night, September 24, and continue five days and six nights. The speaker urged all Kiwanians to be "boosters of the fair because it is the Doylestown Fair."

The name Doylestown means a lot when connected with the word fair, Dr. Turner declared. "Doylestown Fair has a fine reputation for running an excellent exposition, with the educational features stressed as well as the entertainment features."

The speaker explained that the Doylestown Fair is a non-profit-sharing organization. No one is paid a salary except the secretary.

"We stage the fair for the purpose of making a good time for Bucks county folks and those from the surrounding territory and for no other reason whatsoever," President Turner pointed out. "If any money is made, it goes back into the fair for extension purposes."

Dr. Turner explained that the fair grounds is owned by a holding company that leases the grounds to the fair association and that 99 percent of the profits go to the holding company. The grounds were purchased for $16,000 and since the organization of the fair twelve years ago, at least $25,000 has been spent on the grounds. The fair is now free from all debt, an outstanding record in the State.

"The managing of a fair starts the first day of October each year after the fair has ended," Dr. Turner said. A plea for the younger people to take more interest in the business end of the fair was voiced by the speaker.

Dr. Turner spoke of the excellent horse racing at the Doylestown Fair, declaring that "Doylestown is noted for good racing." He called attention to a newspaper clipping that he had in his pocket that described a race at the old Doylestown Fair back in 1874 when a purse of $1000 was offered for the winner of a free-for-all, that was won that year in 2:24.

The job of balancing a fair program, was dwelt on by the speaker as one of the most important things in fair management.

"Always send the crowd away from the fair grounds laughing is my motto," he said.

This year the Doylestown Fair management has secured another fine revue similar to the one staged last year that attracted thousands of people from three states. The same revue this year will be presented at the Reading, York and Lancaster fairs. The revue itself costs more than it does to stage the horse racing for the entire week of the fair.

The stupendous job of preparing the premium lists was explained in detail. He said that the printing of the lists was paid for out of the advertising space sold. Each department in the Doylestown Fair has a separate directing head.

The speaker made a plea for a stronger showing by the 4-H Clubs in Bucks county during fair week. He urged that more entries be made in

May Give Short Weight Coal To The Poor Families

Established coal dealers in Bristol are watching with keen interest the latest move made in Philadelphia to check coal bootlegging.

Edwin C. Emhardt, chief of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, Philadelphia, states that he will introduce into council for approval among other penalties, that all short weight coal be confiscated and distributed to the poor through relief agencies.

"If council approves this measure," he said, "it will prove one of the strongest weapons in the hands of the bureau and serve notice on all coal dealers, including the up-state bootleggers, that gypping the public will be highly unprofitable—in Philadelphia."

Laughter and Lyrics Are Blended in "Shoot the Works"

The inimitable Jack Oakie with his Missouri accent and wisecracks, and Ben Bernie's music are the principal features in the hilariously funny "Shoot the Works," the Paramount comedy which opens today at the Grand Theatre.

The film is a comedy in rapid tempo. It takes music, song, romance—and a grand cast through a tempest of action which speeds its characters through side-shows, flea circuses, carnivals and the radio world, with intimate glimpses of each.

Oakie is pictured as a glib-tongued promoter of freak shows and flagpole sitting championships, with side excursions into twilight romances. Between business failures and forbidden kisses, he meets up with a beautiful singer, and is headed for the straight road when the dice throw him, and he loses his girl.

Oakie wins her later, but not until after many genuinely comic characters and an occasional bit of real romance and pathos weave in and out of the plot. Highlights in a secondary plot are Ben Bernie, the gag-spouting maestro, who leads his well-known lads in a story that is almost like a biography of the man himself. His music is both delightful and original.

Hysterically funny is Roscoe Karns, in the role of a goofy stunt flagpole sitter—who is in a constant turmoil about his philandering sweetie while he stays aloft to win a sitting championship.

Sterling performances are given by Allison Skipworth, as Oakie's faithful and unofficial mother, and by William Frawley, who portrays a famous gossiping columnist.

NONE ARE SERIOUS

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 30.—Two men were injured, with two women slightly shaken up in an accident yesterday, at the corner of Ferry and Swamp Roads, in Falls Township, just outside of Morrisville.

The injured:

Walter P. Travis, of 1650 Pennington Road, Trenton, a gash over the right eye, and cuts on the face and chin.

Brewer Johnson, of Hopewell, N. J., a deep cut on forehead, cuts on right side of face, and abrasions and cuts on right hand.

The injured men were taken to the office of Dr. William H. Kunsman, of this place, by Dominick Kay, of West Trenton avenue, where they were treated.

Miss Alma May Wetzel, of 808 West State street, the driver of the other car, and Miss Dorothy Sutherland, of 908 North Pennsylvania avenue, this place, were badly shaken up in the collision.

Travis, the driver of the first vehicle, was returning with Brewer, with a light truck after having done work on the farm of Henry Wurple, of Lower Makefield Township, when the accident occurred. The truck was proceeding down the Swamp Road towards Morrisville, while the big sedan, in which the women were riding, was coming out the Ferry Road, towards Philadelphia.

Constable Andrew R. Thompson supervised the removal of the two damaged automobiles from the road, and directed traffic until the wrecking crew reached the scene. Both cars were pretty badly damaged.

Wins in California

Running on a platform to "end poverty" by state seizure of idle farm lands and factories, Upton Sinclair, above, widely known Socialist author, has won the Democratic nomination for governor of California. Sinclair, who defeated George Creel, also a well-known writer, will oppose acting Gov. Frank F. Merriam, Republican candidate, in the election.

DROUGHT WAS FORECAST IN RAINFALL TRENDS

Study of Experts Has Been Intensified Since Dry
Period

CANNOT EXPLAIN IT

By William S. Neal
(U. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—(INS)—Increasing rainfall in the southern part of the United States with a similar decrease in the northern part is engaging the attention of experts of the Weather Bureau.

The study of experts has been intensified as a result of the devastating drought of this year. Officials frankly do not attempt to explain the results of their study of rainfall trends over a long period.

"They disclose a well-marked tendency during the past quarter of a century to descending trends in much of the North, especially the Northwest, and to rising trends in the South," said a report by Dr. J. B. Kincer, agricultural meteorologist of the weather bureau. "In most cases in the South and East the curves have changed to downward in recent years."

"The decrease in precipitation in the northwestern states has become a serious matter, with much apprehension as to its effect on agriculture in the immediate future. In this area the maximum on the 40-year graphs is shown for the ten years up to about 1908, or around 25 years ago."

"Since then, there has been a rather regular decrease, as shown by the 10-year moving averages, up to the present time. In Minnesota, for example, the averages for the 10 years ending with 1908 is approximately 29.5 inches, and for the decade ending with 1933 just a little more than 23 inches. In other words, the former 10-year period had nearly 30 per cent more rainfall than the latter."

"In the southwestern states and from the Ohio valley southward, the general tendency has been to increased precipitation, in contrast to the falling off in the north."

"For example, the average in Oklahoma for the 10 years ending with 1918 was a little less than 30 inches, and for that ending in 1931 more than 35 inches. In Tennessee, the average for the decade ending with 1904 was less than 48 inches, and for that ending with 1929 approximately 53 inches. This upward trend covered a period of about 25 years, with a more or less gradual rise from minimum to maximum."

"In the middle Atlantic area, from New Jersey and Pennsylvania to North Carolina, inclusive, a downward trend is shown, somewhat similar to that in the Northwest, from 1907 to 1930, but more recently it has changed to upward."

"For this group of states, on a 10-year average basis, precipitation has decreased from 46.5 inches in 1907 to

MAKE CHANGES IN FACULTY AT THE LANGHORNE SCHOOL

School Board Also Alters A Number of The Courses

OPENING DATE IS 6TH

Grades Are Assigned To Four Buildings; Music Study
Added

LANGHORNE, Aug. 30.—The Langhorne-Middletown schools will open for the new term on Thursday, September 6th. There will be but one session, from nine a. m. until 12 noon on the first day.

Grades have been assigned to the following buildings: High school, 10th, 11th and 12th; grade school, 4th, 7th, 8th and 9th; Friends' School, 3rd, 5th and 6th; primary school, 1st and 2nd.

The ninth grade will assemble with the other high school classes in the high school building to register and complete class schedules under the supervision of the deans, Miss Catherine Wildman will assist and advise all Freshmen in selecting their courses.

Children of the first grade will be required to have vaccination and birth certificates. Miss Esther Wildman, the school nurse, has already finished the summer "round-up" and notified parents of the importance of having children examined by a physician so that physical defects may be corrected as nearly as possible in order to prevent loss of time later in the term.

High school pupils who have transferred from other districts will not be admitted until their records are received.

Regular work begins on Friday, and pupils who delay entering the first day will miss the very important introductory material usually given in the new subjects.

The school board has made several changes in the faculty and courses of study, and also many repairs and improvements in the buildings and grounds. Miss Georgianna Staehle has been appointed to the history department and Miss Florence Rowe to the English department in the high school. Miss Rowe will also have charge of the music in the upper grades. Miss Rebecca Bond, a graduate of Langhorne-Middletown High School and West Chester State Teachers' College, will take the position as teacher of the third grade to fill vacancy which occurred when Mrs. Vansant resigned to go to the Langhorne Manor School District. William Breuninger, another local graduate who also completed the four year course at Kutztown State Teachers' College, will teach history and geography in the 7th and 8th grades.

In the high school a course of study in music will be added to the curriculum, and chorus work, which was dropped, will be resumed. It is hoped that one or two orchestras will be formed, thus using some very fine talent which has developed within the past few years.

New basal reading series will be used in the primary grade. The Gates-Huber system, completed after ten years of experimentation by Dr. Arthur Gates of Columbia University, one of the country's outstanding authorities on reading, is being adopted by an increasingly large number of the progressive schools every year. The contents of the books is of entirely original work and recreational types.

The playground on Maple avenue has been graded and seeded, thus eliminating the unsightly swamp which was caused by poor drainage on the low section near Cherry street. Buildings and furniture have received coats of paint and varnish where needed. The board also purchased new equipment for the science and commercial departments.

The policy of building up the library has been followed in the purchasing of many reference and fiction volumes. The school library has one of the best selections of books of its size in the county, and has been commended repeatedly in the high school inspector's annual report. With the increase in reading ability has come a corresponding improvement in most of the other high school and grade subjects. At no time has the interest in "outside" reading been so high as during the past few years. The school and town libraries deserve the highest support of all who believe in the educational development of the community.

Teachers have been assigned as follows: W. A. Thomas, supervising principal; high school—Miss Catherine Wildman, Mr. Beck, Mr. Garvin Peffer, Mr. Russell Stompler, Miss Collins, Miss Holt, Miss Staehle, Miss Rowe; grade school—first grade, Miss Lentz; second, Miss Lewis; third, Miss Bond; fourth, Miss Snyder; fifth grade, Miss Davenport; sixth, Miss Bowers; seventh and eighth, Miss Satterthwaite, Mrs. Price, Mr. Breuninger.

DEPLETION OF STREAMS

Many a fisherman has wondered why he did not get more bites. He has blamed the weather, the direction of the wind, his bait. At one time he decides he has the wrong kind of tackle, and at another, he blames the stage of the water. Again, he settles down to belief that old-timers who prate about catching them as long as their arms and as fast as they could reel them in are tall talkers with little regard for truth.

There may or may not be consolation to him in the conclusion reached by Federal agents that the streams have been overfished.

Ten million people in the United States go fishing at least once a year. And, due to accessibility of fishing streams by automobile, a large percentage of that number are pretty constantly on the job during the fishing season. The consequence is that they are taking fish faster than nature, helped by the government, can replenish the supply.

Federal, state and private hatcheries are turning out an average of 1,100,000,000 young fish annually. This should be enough to give every one of the ten million anglers plenty of sport. That it does not is due to the fact that the infant mortality rate is high among the young fish because of lack of food and their natural enemies.

Something should be done about fishing being among the inalienable rights of the citizen. But few fishermen are willing to surrender a season or so to give the game fish a chance to multiply, and if the government closes streams to all fishing for a year or so it forfeits that revenue from fishing licenses which has been used in some states to stock the streams.

NO NEWS

A London newspaper of July 29 reports that for two days Dublin and southern Ireland were "curiously affected" by the non-publication of the Dublin morning and evening newspapers.

All sorts of rumors got into circulation, the wildest series of stories of developments in Central Europe became current and from the provinces came stories hardly less sensational. But for a settlement of the difficulty in the Dublin press rooms the public would have been deprived of news of the Dal (a major reason) which was to meet a day or two later.

Well, it may affect the Irish that way but not us. Two days in which the telephone did not ring, for two days one may have been sitting here while every now and then a good news, and the prospect of missing two days or longer of the news of a congressional session leaves us in a rather of uneasiness.

It has always been rumored the Emerald Isle had its excellent points. There seems to be some foundation for the report, now.

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER XX

Caroline returned from the university in a cheerful mood. "There's a kick in being on the road, going somewhere," she said to her still disgruntled father, "no matter where it ends."

"It will probably end in your marrying a factory worker, like yourself," he retorted.

Caroline's face clouded. "I wish I could fall in love with Malcolm," she said wistfully. "He's the finest man I've ever known."

"The motorcycle may help," Philip glibbed, "propinquity, you know."

Caroline stared at him. Her clear, level gaze made him uneasy. She shook her head. "I've tried to let myself think that way," she said with startling honesty, "but it's something deeper he stirs in me. He hasn't kissed me, and I don't want him to."

"Afraid you'll be trapped, physically?"

"Not afraid. I wanted to find out how it is I feel about him, I mean. If I'd wanted him to kiss me I'd have quit, because I know I don't love him."

Her father uttered a sound of disbelief. "With all respect for your modesty, my dear, do you mean to say you've never been kissed by any one but Howard?"

The name was like a blow to Caroline. She was silent for a moment before she answered. Then, "Of course I have," she said evenly, "but Malcolm is different. I'm serious about him. It may sound silly to you but there's something idealistic about our friendship. If merely being near him could give me the kind of thrill that you suggest leads to marriage I'd be terribly disappointed."

"Still clinging to that hopeless attachment for Howard?"

"Not clinging. I'd give anything to forget him and fall in love with Malcolm."

"That's absurd," her father snapped. "I profoundly hope your love endures until the right man comes along."

Caroline smiled. "In the meantime," she said with a sudden turn to lightness, "I've my lunch to put up." She started toward the kitchen.

"Before you go," he stopped her, "could you let me have five dollars? I'm short of change."

Caroline obliged. It was not the first time she had given him of her small wages. But she never asked questions, sparing them both embarrassment, because in her mind was a growing conviction that he had got himself into a muddle which he was ashamed to confess. It would shame her too to admit to him her fear of his incompetence.

She worried in secret, felt asleep thinking that she must succeed in something larger than factory work if they were ever to get away from Edge Street.

The next morning she was so silent when Malcolm called for her that he thought she was subdued by the idea of riding to work on a motorcycle. The gray humor which had seemed to him appropriate to the occasion turned to a blue reserve. Caroline, quick to feel his sensitiveness, brought herself out of her depressed mood, and re-established their usual cheerful companionship.

It was fun to ride on the motorcycle. The early morning blew roses into her cheeks and exhilaration into her spirits. She pitted people who lay abed, developing hang-over headaches, some of them, getting up to go out in the dead of the day and poky motor cars.

Malcolm turned to glance back at her now and then and pass a word of banter. Her answering laughter was unfeigned. She was enjoying herself. She might stand all day at a machine that pasted labels on glass jars and think with acute longing of the breeze-swept golf course at the country club, but just now she had no wish to be anywhere in the world but with Malcolm on his motorcycle.

It was a fresh June morning. Traces of dew still lingered in shady spots. The air was sweet even in the grubby streets they traversed to reach the factory. When they arrived and Malcolm said, "Well, how did you like it?" Caroline replied that they must go some Sunday morning to a lake in the hills and have a picnic breakfast.

"We can take our lunch pails now," he told her, "and hop over to a park that's about a mile from here and eat under the trees."

"Today?"

"Every day."

"Heavenly!" Caroline exclaimed. "I'll meet you here two seconds after the whistle blows."

The cars and motorcycles belonging to the factory employees were parked in an enclosure which, because of the hilly topography of the land, was laid at the side of the main building, close to the front. Those who used the entrance to the executive offices could easily be observed by anyone in the workers' parking ground.

True to her word, Caroline was there, waiting by Malcolm's motorcycle shortly after twelve o'clock. Malcolm was delayed. Caroline got out her compact and powdered her nose, a rite she had not stopped for in the hat room.

A long, gleaming car purred up the main drive. Caroline caught a glimpse of it in her mirror and flashed around on an impulse she could not stay.

Her eyes remained glued on it and she was simply a model for a spot, although her mind accepted the fact that it would be disastrous to her for the young man in the car to see her there—to discover that she was working under an assumed name in his father's factory.

It was the first time she had seen Howard since that fateful day when she had broken their engagement. Her eyes were hungry for him.

He did not glance her way—a delivery for which she breathed a silent prayer of gratitude. She watched him, without moving, as he got out of his car, flung the door to behind him and ran jauntily up the steps to the building entrance. He was a trifle thinner, perhaps, and tanned to a beautiful bronze. He looked as she remembered him—something like a model for good clothes. His light grey suit—had Park Avenue tailor stamped in every line of it and his soft Panama hat looked fine enough to be drawn through a finger ring.

Caroline held her breath until he had vanished from her sight. And in her heart was a new hurt. There was no touch of sadness about Howard. His air was that of a self-satisfied man. The loss of a sweetheart had apparently left no shadow at all upon his life.

A bear she could not suppress sneaked out of her eyes and might have trickled down her cheeks leaving a telltale mark had she not seen Malcolm approaching. Malcolm in his loose-fitting, working clothes, somehow looking as though they were only a disguise for him. Hastily Caroline wiped the tears away and smiled at him, chided him for keeping her waiting.

"How do you know our coach and four wouldn't turn into a pumpkin?" she demanded.

Malcolm's glance fell upon Howard's car. "It will—some day," he said seriously, "and when it does it's going to be a pumpkin like that's over there. Beauty, isn't it?"

"I don't think so," Caroline declared and laughed at her snippy tone.

"Of course I know you're spoiled after this coach and four," Malcolm said, grinning, "but you wouldn't refuse to ride in a pumpkin, would you? Because I'm going to have one. Guess what kept me."

"I'm just out of guesses. There weren't any fresh ones on the market this morning."

"I was in conference with the cups. I'm going up in the world. Have another department to inspect the powder."</

WASHINGTON PARADE

By Karl M. Kahn
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1934, by I. N. S.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30—(INS)—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson may appear to take a few more tricks but the ace of trump in the new dealer's deck now is Donald R. Richberg.

Johnson may go; he may remain; he may have a job, in or out of the NRA, that has the trappings of power. But it begins to appear almost as certain as ants at a picnic that it will be a show window job—everything in the window and nothing in the shop.

Richberg will remain. In just what capacity none knows. It is doubtful if Richberg knows yet. Maybe Mr. Roosevelt doesn't know.

But when Richberg has finished the job at which he is working, the President will have another for him. The President has told him so.

Meanwhile, whether or not the President has told him, Richberg is No. 1 man with Mr. Roosevelt.

These two, Johnson and Richberg, were the Damon and Pythias of the new dealers.

Johnson once told a friend that if Richberg and Edward P. McGrady, Assistant Administrator for Labor, were to leave the Blue Eagle's nest, the General would just about up and quit, too.

Johnson and Richberg still observe the amenities in public, but their smiles and handshakes and soft soap words do not conceal their bitterness from the wise ones.

The wise ones, and just about everybody in town is wise to this situation by now, know that Johnson and Richberg now talk about each other in private the way Johnson and Clarence Darrow were talking about each other in public three months ago.

If Johnson goes there will be few tears shed in administration circles. The General is not popular with others in the official family Mr. Roosevelt has brought to Washington. They don't like his manners, some don't like his policies, practically all believe he has outlived his usefulness to the New Deal.

Their dislikes and their beliefs may or may not have had influence with the President. Certainly Mr. Roosevelt, grateful to Johnson for what he did accomplish, and always loyal to his friends, has tried to reconcile differences in fairness to all and at the same time tried to not violate any of the principles at stake.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

SHOPPERS, faced with a double holiday this week-end, will find that in spite of generally higher food prices broiling and frying chickens and ducks are cheap.

Ham, long a Labor Day favorite, is not expensive. Tomatoes, green beans, and peas represent good values in fresh vegetables, while cantaloupes and seedless grapes are our recommendations for fruits.

From the above information our experts have made up two Sunday menus and a labor-saving Labor Day menu which should give you the most for your time and money.

Low Cost Dinner

Baked Eggplant Stuffed with Ham
Tomatoes and Onions
Creamed Potatoes
Lettuce and Cucumber Salad
Bread and Butter
Cantaloupe
Tea or Coffee

Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Duck with Green Apple Sauce or
Broiled Chicken
Candied Sweet Potatoes
Sauté Corn and Green Peppers
Sliced Tomatoes
Rolls and Butter
White Grape and Orange Cup
Tea or Coffee (hot or iced)

Labor Day Menu

Olives Celery Radishes
Assorted Cold Cuts of Meat
Tomatoes Stuffed with Vegetable Salad
Hot Biscuits
Devil's Food Cake
Tea or Coffee (hot or iced)
Ginger Ale

Whatever happens there probably will be some thunder from Johnson. There always is, and some flashes of lightning, too.

He is reported, by those who have watched the attempts to re-feather the Blue Eagle's nest, to have thundered pretty noisily already.

When, for instance, he bluntly announced, "You're trying to edge me out of the picture like George Peek was edged out, but I'm not going to be edged out. I'll stay where I am or I'll quit."

The "edging" was to have been into one of those show window jobs that would have given Johnson reams of publicity, kept him in the public eye, adorned him with the trappings of power.

But the General has been around long enough to know when he is offered something with everything in the window and nothing in the shop.

That is one reason there are to be more conferences about the future of the NRA—and of Gen. Johnson.

AND NOW COMES LABOR DAY

which marks the end of summer playing. It is a day of play—for play for the people of a nation—but it marks the beginning of the work period into which each one of us must enter during the Fall and Winter months. With the resumption of your work, it becomes necessary to think of protection to your family and yourself.

If you should meet with an accident or become sick, have you provided insurance to protect your lost earnings while you are disabled? Have you thought of the possibility of death—from accident or disease? Have you insured your life so that funds will be available to provide for the expenses which death saddles upon those perhaps least able to bear them?

Beginning with Labor Day—if you are not insured—it is time to insure. If already insured—perhaps you need additional protection. The cost is slight but the protection by insurance is comforting.

Pay your premiums promptly. Never let your policy lapse.

various departments by those clubs.

Dr. Turner told of the regular "billion war" that is carried by the fair management because of the fact that it is impossible for all fairs to have "their own week," which makes it necessary for conflicting dates. This year Doylestown Fair will be staged the same week as Trenton's fine fair, and necessarily the bill-posters that get on the job first get the choice positions. Doylestown Fair this year started to bill the fair seven weeks before the opening.

Tuesday of fair week will be taken up entirely by the "Congress of Daredavits." There will be no horse races that day but the entertainment feature will include an "ash pan derby," a race between old automobiles not costing over $50, a motorcycle race and a head-on collision of automobiles on the fair grounds.

"Our midway attractions have always been outstanding," Dr. Turner declared, "but we have always tried to keep the midway clean and for that reason Doylestown Fair has a reputation of having a clean fair. The rides and shows along the midway never do pay but we conduct them to please the youngsters."

Checking up on gate receipts was another important part of fair management mentioned by the speaker as being very important.

Complimentary tickets, Dr. Turner declared, are usually "a headache" for any fair management.

"The great Springfield Fair last year cut out all complimentary tickets and it will be our policy this year as in other years to cut down to the minimum the granting of comps. If one person is entitled to a complimentary ticket there is no reason why all should not get comps. But complimentary tickets do not pay for the fair. We will hold down the complimentary tickets to the advertisers. We must have paid customers to continue operation. We have a reputation of paying our bills and that is one reason that we are able to pay. It's your fair, gentlemen."

42.6 inches in 1930. For Georgia and Florida there has been an upward trend from around 48 inches in 1918 to more than 52 inches in 1933.

Whether these changes have any relation to the present drought in the Northwest is a matter of conjecture. Records show, however, that the drought has been duplicated in the past. A study of St. Paul records show that two similar droughts have occurred in the last 100 years.

In three 10-year periods ending with 1848, 1894 and 1933, low average rainfall was shown. The time interval between the first and second low points was 46 years and between the second and third, 35 years. The downward trend reached a maximum in the present year.

If history repeats itself, the north-west may expect an upward trend in rainfall for a few years.

APPLIQUED FLOWERS COVER SKIRT OF A WHITE ORGANZA GOWN

By Nadia De Beaud
(I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)
PARIS — (INS) — There is something exotic about the Riviera owing to the prevalence of eucalyptus trees, ragged in appearance, the palms rising neatly among them, huge cacti sprawling awkwardly over impossible stony surfaces. In an effort to attract visitors, Monte Carlo has been undertaking to present novel attractions, such as out of door gambling and a restaurant, built out over the Mediterranean sea. The main illumination comes from a fanlike fountain of water, on which lights play through the dinner hours.

Among the many guests present at the opening were E. Phillips Oppenheim, the novelist, Admiral and Mrs. A. T. Long, I thought Lady Castlereagh especially smart in a white Lelong organza gown, the skirt of which was covered with flowers of the same applied, each petal outlined in paillettes. A caplet of the same was covered with similar embroidery.

SHORT CUTS TO THE DINNER TABLE

By Vera A. Schneider

A Simple Sunday Dinner is Planned With Ham as the Piece de Resistance

One of our readers writes: "Why, Miss Schneider, are Sunday dinners planned on a much more elaborate scale than our week-day dinners? It seems to me that home-makers would rather serve a simple meal on that day, particularly in the summertime, and I think their families should give them a 'break' by requesting that this be done." I don't know just how the custom originated, Mrs. Bryer, but I can imagine that the mothers of yesterday were probably thinking of Monday, when there would be much to be done in the way of laundry work and "straightening up" after the family's day of rest, and when left-overs requiring little work in preparing would be sort of a god-send. At any rate, we'll depart from that old custom and give you a simple menu for this Sunday, anyway.

Sunday's Dinner
Grapefruit Cocktail
Celery Radishes
Baked Virginia Ham
Glazed Sweet Potatoes

Spinach With Egg Garnish
Dressed Watercress
Spanish Cream Coffee

And we'll include also menus for Friday and Saturday with pertinent recipes.

Friday's Dinner

Boiled Fresh Salmon with Creamed Shrimp Sauce
Boiled Potatoes
Shredded String Beans
Whole Wheat Bread
Lemon Meringue Tarts
Iced Tea or Coffee

Saturday's Supper

Planked Hamburg Steak
Mashed Potatoes
Harvard Beets
Tomato Basket Salad
Sliced Peaches & Cream Iced Tea

Harvard Beets

12 small young beets (cooked)
1 1/2 teaspoonsful cornstarch
1/2 cupful sugar
2 tablespoonsful butter
4 tablespoonsful vinegar
4 tablespoonsful water
Dice the cooked beets. Mix the cornstarch and sugar, add the vinegar and water, and cook for five minutes, stirring constantly. Add the beets and stand over low heat (or use double boiler) until thoroughly heated. Add the butter, melted, shortly before serving.

Tomato Salad

Slice the top from medium sized tomatoes. Remove the seedy portions and fill the cavities with any preferred salad. Place across the top of each filled tomato, three cooked asparagus tips and a teaspoonful of dressing. To make a handle for the basket, cut a narrow strip of green pepper and insert the ends directly opposite each other into the tomato. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

BREAK FOR DRUNKS

DENVER — (INS) — This is bargain time for Denver drunkards. Chief of Police Albert T. Clark has issued notice that ordinary drunks may obtain their release and avoid facing Municipal Judge Alvin Pickens, who perfected the highly distasteful "castor oil cure" for inebriates, by simply leaving $12 with the desk clerk and signing a bond. In the past such a bond has cost $27—and you had to face the police judge the next day.
